

10 Months Pregnant with a Child Called 'Unfinished Business'

"The unfinished business of the TRC must be finished. Give reparations to those who have suffered. Soon we will be saying we have twenty years of democracy and we are still the same as all those years ago."

- Khulumani Art/Memory workshop participant, 2007

In 2007 and 2008, SAHA, in conjunction with the Khulumani Support Group, conducted a series of Art/Memory workshops with survivors of political violence in the East Rand and the Vaal Triangle. These were aimed at exploring people's memories, their personal histories, and their understandings of violence and loss during the decades of repression, resistance and the struggle for national liberation.

The materials produced during these workshops serve as powerful reminders of the failure of the TRC to address the violations perpetrated on the East Rand in the early 1990s, and the ongoing need to address both symbolic and financial reparations as part of national unity and reconciliation efforts in South Africa.
