

The SAHA / SABC Truth Commission Special Report

Truth Commission Special Report was an investigative documentary series that reported on the proceedings of the TRC. It was broadcast nationally by the South African Broadcasting Corporation (SABC) between 1996 and 1998. The weekly episodes form a critical resource that helps to present in an accessible and engaging way what the TRC was attempting to achieve. By focusing on footage from the TRC's public hearings, they provide a powerful window into the conflicts of the past and the ongoing challenges for reconciliation in South Africa.

Copies of episodes have been largely unavailable since they were originally broadcast. SAHA has now retrieved them from the different archives where they were housed and has repackaged them to create an interactive product, intended to make the work of the TRC more accessible; to enrich history and heritage education; and to support ongoing transitional justice and reconciliation work in South Africa.

The development of this product was made possible by funding received from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation and the Atlantic Philanthropies. The episodes from the series have been reproduced with the kind permission of the SABC.

TRC Posters

These posters were produced by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission as part of a campaign to promote awareness of its work and to encourage victims to give testimony to the TRC. The slogans of these posters today speak to the unfinished business of the TRC.
